EARLY REVIEW

"Annie and Alyce are two women without much in common, but whose lives intersect in a place that has surprises for both of them. In telling their stories, Chrysteen Braun blends memoir and mystery in an entertaining page-turner."

-Susan Denley, former Associate Features editor, Los Angeles Times

"The Man in Cabin Number Five by Chrysteen Braun is an engaging novel that intertwines the stories of two women, Annie and Alyce, who are connected by cabins in Lake Arrowhead, California. With Annie set on a new future, Alyce returns to the cabins 50 years later, after discovering her father committed suicide and murder.

Braun's writing is captivating, personal and accessible. Her use of descriptive imagery makes you feel as though you are living each moment described, embarking on the same adventures, sharing in the same memories. The book is full of exposition, with characters slowly adding new layers of insight and new information carefully revealed as the story progresses. One of the best parts of the book is the way Braun ends each chapter—always on a cliffhanger. This forward motion, action and intensity never let up, which ensures that there is no section of the book where readers may feel bogged down by the details. For those looking for a complex, engaging novel you won't be able to put down, this book is for you."

Cabin Illustrations

"In an intriguing set of stories, each cabin on the mountain serves as the setting for a compelling tale of loss, betrayal—and love. Chrysteen Braun's clever premise gives us a satisfying glimpse into the lives of others—both past and present."

Watch for Book Two Later this Year

In book two of the Guest Book Trilogy, Annie Parker's life is coming together. Her move to the Lake Arrowhead mountains and restoring a group of 1920s era cabins was just what she needed for a new start. However, against Noah's wishes, she takes on an out-of-town design project that leads her down a path she realizes she should have never gone down.

In Book One, Annie unwittingly uncovered the mystery surrounding an unsolved murder and the man who stayed in cabin number five, and now, she's met Carrie Davis, a woman who wants to update her childhood home on the lake. When Carrie tells her she thinks her parents stayed in the cabins in the late 20s when Bugsy Siegel was involved with an underground speakeasy and distillery, Annie finds them in the original guest gooks, in Cabin Number Three. Is there a possible link to an underground past?

Just when life is getting back to normal, she welcomes her childhood friend, Sarah, who needs some time away from a marriage she should have never entered into.

The Girls in Cabin Number Three combine women's fiction with romance, noir cozy mystery and suspense.
